Hole more putts

Take advantage of birdie opportunities

Matching the loft of your putter to your technique is critical in becoming a consistent putter and therefore seeing more putts drop. Having the incorrect loft will negatively impact many factors such as launch off the putter face, spin imparted on the ball and overall roll on the green.

Player with incorrect putter loft

If the ball launches too high with too much spin it causes the ball to bounce. Likewise, if the ball launches too low it causes the ball to dig into the ground and hop. Both of these impacts negatively on distance control and accuracy (3-putts and shorter misses).

Player fitted for correct putter loft

You'll create a smooth repeatable roll off the clubface, with a true roll found early.

You'll increase your chance of making putts. Your distance control will improve. Fewer putts per round.

That impacts your scorecard.

Does your putter loft match your stroke?

Have you ever seen your putt bounce and just blamed it on the green?

It's time you matched your putter to your game.

Hole more putts now.

Play more golf

Start anywhere with the family

If you're looking for a great family bonding session, then there's a great way to use golf over 2 hours and 9 holes.
Let everyone play the course in a way they can enjoy it.

If you're the expert, then tee off from the front tees. Male or female, place the emphasis on being in play. You're not showing off how far you hit it. (By the way, quietly check if your percentage of fairways hit has improved, if you club down to fairway or hybrid).

Let your non-golfers, or inexperienced golfers, tee off from where they like. If they've never played golf, or have just started learning, we'd suggest 50 yards from the green. There's no point having non-golfers hit from bunkers. Let them throw it out. This isn't competitive. Make it a family better-ball score.

Get an introduction to golf

If, together with some friends and their family, you'd like your non-golfers to get a sound introduction to the game first, then let us give them an introductory lesson for an hour. What a great gift! We promise to make it fun, especially for children.
