Revealing the lie

Manufacturers try and solve problems

Most golfers lose the ball to the right. So, some manufacturers make, especially their game improvement irons, with more and more upright lies. They're trying to find a solution to what MIGHT be a problem you have.

Research shows that for some golfers who lose the ball right, a more upright lie does change average ball flight. It does however show that for some it has entirely different results.

Each of you is different.

Your spine tilt; knee flex; and how low or high
you prefer the handle, will not only affect lie angle;

but potentially also shaft length.

And then there's your in-swing movement.
An inside path and outside path will probably create different lie angle needs.

The best for you

Don't settle for what you have

There's a famous saying from Dr. Bob Rotella:

But the only way to tell is an assessment

That's why we want you to start your journey to a better golf experience with a proper assessment.

Is your lie angle correct? Are your clubs making it harder to hit good shots?

Why not find out?

Book an assessment >

"Hit the shot you know you can hit, not the one you think you should."

Great advice for when you're on the golf course in competition. But for most golfers, the implication of that is "most longer clubs stay in the bag forever". Most golfers struggle with consistency when using fairway woods, hybrids, longer irons, and sometimes even mid-irons, so how do you apply this advice? Do most of these clubs remain unused in the bag forever?

We have some sports psychology for you:

"This quarter, learn to hit a shot you can't hit consistently at the moment, and create more opportunities."

Get a better experience

By increasing the length of club that you can hit consistently from the fairway, you change your golf game. Escape from difficult positions becomes easier. Get in touch and hitting up opportunity becomes easier.

Both of those lead to a better playing experience.
