The price of success

We keep reading about the need to “rein back the golf ball” to ensure it doesn’t go as far, and that it should become more susceptible to a slice or hook. Apparently, the golf ball is now a rocket destined to fly true and straight.

So, has your golf ball been going too far? Has your golf ball been going too straight?

Do you want that problem? Don't undo technology

If you do, then apparently the latest generation Srixon Golf Balls go too fast, too far, and too straight. It's time you check them out. Are you going to take advantage of improvements in putters? New design and technology will help you square the face at address and impact to increase your chances of rattling the back of another hole. If you are, then please make full use of the technology.

What length of putter is right for you? The standard-length putter is too long for most golfers.

A putter length that's too long for you will probably cause your eye line to be inside the ball. That impacts your ability to "see" the putt. If you get your eyes over the ball with a putter that's too long, you'll need more arch. That will make it harder to square the face at impact.

The Cleveland Frontline Iso Slant Neck Putter is especially effective at helping to square the face through impact. But, all that optical benefit is lost if your eyeline is out.

Buy better performance

Take advantage of both the latest putting technology and a proper fitting.

We're here to help you sink more putts.
