It's playtime

How about some 40-yard golf?

The average golfer hits 3 to 6 greens in regulation per round. That means up to 15 holes per round will probably require a wedge shot within 40 yards. That's why it's good to get into the habit of regularly playing 9 holes of 40-yard golf.

Try not to complicate the opening pitch shot on each hole. Your target is to complete the 9 holes in 27 shots.

Celebrate every time you get 24. More experienced golfers should really be looking to score from this distance. Their target is to get through in 24 shots, or less, over 9 holes.

How far under 27 could you go?

Let's schedule some time at the practice green, or perhaps an accompanied play round of 40-yard golf, and get you well below 27 and having more fun around the greens.

Better players have smaller margins of error.
Controlled distance is a must.

Callaway had a super-computer that used artificial intelligence to design a face that helps better ball strikers work within the margins of error their lower handicaps allow. Would the MAVRIK Pro improve your approach shot performance? Come and see us or

Par 3 strategy

Flag hunting?

Making the flag your only focus on par 3s increases risk and closes off possibilities. And it often leaves you staring at double or triple bogey. But if you know what to look for, you'll know the best spot to aim at.

Beware of sucker flags

A flag towards the front right may be tempting. But if it's on a downward slope or behind a deep greenside bunker, it's not worth risking an extremely difficult up and down.

There's a reason bunkers or water are often front right and left of the green; course designers know this is where recreational golfers usually miss.

Hit more greens

Let's schedule some time on the course and help you make better decisions that will put you into more scoring positions.
