Get stronger go longer Generate more power without adding strain

Generating more power can put strain on your hips and back, and over the long-term lead to injury. But a stronger core protects you, while adding distance.

More power without increased injury risk

The side plank strengthens your core, butt and shoulders, key muscles for your swing and posture.

If you're unsure how to perform this exercise, please ask a fitness professional. They could also show you progressions if you want more of a challenge.

Double your advantage

A stronger core becomes even more of an advantage when your swing is consistent. A swing assessment helps us see where you're at. If that's something that interests you, when we see you again, let's talk about it, or start a conversation now.
