From the Founder's desk

It is exam week for our PGA Diploma students, with the learners undergoing a combination of written and practical assessments to ensure real-world competence in various golf-specific fields such as coaching, club management, retailing and equipment. This rigorous testing has led to our graduates being highly sought-after by leading golf industry employers both locally and internationally. Here are some images from yesterday's practical teaching ability assessments, where our 3rd year students have to give a 30-minute lesson and conduct 2 instructional clinics.

Meet Bernard and Heinrich Student Spotlight Our Student Spotlight this week is on two in-form players who are excelling in their respective programmes at BSI. Firstly let us introduce you to Bernard Meyer, Grade 12 Junior Academy student. Here is what Bernard has to say about his time here at BSI:

"The best way to describe my relationship with everyone at BSI, is family. The atmosphere is competitive but extremely supportive at the same time. The friendships I've built will last a lifetime.

The coaching team have helped me immensely and I'm very grateful to call them 'My Team'. The academic staff are very supportive and do all they can to help us excel at school. My personal area of improvement is my knowledge, that includes both on the sport side and of myself. Experiencing different situations and learning from them has helped me grow, not only as an athlete but as a human being. My biggest change was also mental, setting goals for myself in golf and academics. This has helped me become the person & player I am today.

Next year I am going to join the Elite Academy programme at BSI for six months, thereafter I will start my college golf journey in USA.

I'd like to thank the academic staff who have been with me since the start. It has been an invaluable learning experience. To the coaching team, I'd like to thank you all for the wisdom they've shared about the game and in life. Without these people I would not have been where I am today."

The effect of expectations on golf performance

Performance Tip

The Performance Tip of the Week is brought to you by Mark Fairbank, BSI

Mental Coach & Head of Golf Performance

As golfers we arrive on the tee full of excitement and pumped up for our day on-course. We expect to hit good golf shots and to score well. The reality is, while we will hit some quality golf shots, we are also guaranteed to hit a whole bunch of bad ones.

It is unfortunately our expectations that can do much more harm than good. The belief that the best players in the world hit every shot close and make every putt could not be further from the truth and unfortunately creates completely unrealistic expectations on how we, as casual golfers, should manage ourselves on the golf course and should be performing.

To illustrate this point, the average proximity to the hole from 100-125 yards (approx. 90m to 110m) on the PGA Tour is 31.7 ft (approx. 10m). Many players believe that tour average from this distance would be inside 10ft or around 3m. These false expectations can lead to poor decision making. Amateur and weekend golfers are aiming way to aggressively at flags which leads to bad misses and big numbers. Additionally, when we hit a wedge to 9m from the hole we often berate ourselves, when in fact it is actually a worldclass golf shot.

In putting, tour players only make 50% of putts from just inside 8 ft. Again there is this belief that tour players never miss short putts.

Based on these numbers, you have to be kinder to yourself and be realistic with your expectations. The nature of golf dictates that you will hit bad shots, you will get bad bounces, you will miss putts both long and short ones, but if your expectations are realistic, you will enjoy it significantly more and ultimately perform better with higher levels of acceptance after each shot and an overall more relaxed approach to each shot.
